Students will possess entry-level knowledge related to assessment and prescription including the ability to select and implement relevant tools, correctly interpret findings, and develop appropriate programs that address limitations and meet individualized goals.

Students will be able to describe the role of nutrition on overall health and performance.

Students will develop and demonstrate skills in identifying, analyzing, and synthesizing discipline-specific research.