Undergraduate students who complete GEOG101/POLI104 “World Regional Geography” can identify how global and local processes make places.

Students will be able to critique societal assumptions about environmental, political, and/or urban spaces.

Students in the skill-building courses in the GEOG minor (GEOG219; GEOG/POLI206; POLI310) will apply methods to query the relationship between people and place.